All the Building Industries in Pittsburg Are Tied Up by a Giant Lock-Out.

STOP WORK SHORT

Workmen Leave Public Buildings Unfinished, Including Many Public Schools.

(Special By Scripps-McRae.)
Pittsburg, Aug. 3.—The lockout of the building trades became effective this morning and it is estimated that at noon fully twenty thousand men are idle and almost all building is at a standstill throughout the city.

All Trades
The twenty thousand men idle include structural iron workers, carpenters, bricklayers, painters, decorators, plumbers. It is thought that others will join before night over doubling the present numbers.

Half Completed
Many of the public buildings are left in a half completed state and on several school buildings which were expected to be finished by fall, the delay will put the work back a month at least.

KING EDWARD SAYS FUTURE IS BRIGHT

Sovereign of Great Britain Expresses Good Will Towards the Irish in An Address.

Cowes, Isle of Wight, Aug. 3.—The royal yacht, Victoria and Albert, reached there last evening and King Edward immediately ordered the issue of the following address:

"To My Irish People:—I desire on leaving Ireland to express to my Irish people how deeply I have been touched by the kindness and good will they have shown to the queen and myself. Our experience on previous visits has indeed prepared us for a traditional welcome of a warm-hearted race, but our expectations have been exceeded. Wherever we have gone, in town or country, tokens of loyal and affection proffered by every section of the community have made an enduring impression upon our hearts.

Hope for Brighter Day
"For a country so attractive, and a people so gifted, we cherish the warmest regard, and it is therefore, with the supreme satisfaction that I have so often during my stay heard the hope expressed that a brighter day is dawning upon Ireland. I shall eagerly await the fulfillment of this hope.

"Its realization under divine providence depends largely upon the steady development of self-reliance and co-operation upon better and more practical education, upon the growth of industrial and commercial enterprise and upon that increase of mutual toleration and respect which the responsibility of my Irish people now enjoy in the public administration of their local affairs is well fitted to teach.

"It is my earnest prayer that these and other means of national well-being may multiply from year to year in Ireland, and that the blessings of peace, contentment and prosperity, may be abundantly vouchsafed to her."

Copies of this address were posted throughout Ireland today.

SEASON OPENS IN THIS CITY

"King Ping Pong" Will Be Given First Appearance Here, According to Chicago Daily.

One of yesterday's Chicago papers tells of a young society girl of that city who has decided to take up musical comedy this fall. Although the play has not been announced among the local attractions the same paper is authority for the statement that the young singer will be first heard on the comedy stage in this city. The story follows:

"Martha Washington Meister the young Chicago girl, who will make her professional debut in comic opera early this month is known all over the west side for the power and beauty of her voice. She has had musical instruction since she was 8 years old and has refused all offers to go on the stage until recently, when Frederick Hunt heard her sing 'Marie' the leading part in a comedy called 'Daughter of the Regiment,' given by the pupils of Mme. De Marion, under whose direction, Miss Meister has been studying. Mr. Hunt made the young singer a proposition, the acceptance of which her parents acquiesced in, and she will appear as prima donna in the 'King Ping Pong' company, which begins its season in Janesville, Wis., soon.

REJECTED LOVER GAINS FORTUNE IN AUSTRALIA

Empire State Man Acquires $3,500,000 In the Gold Fields and Passes Away at 94 Years.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 3.—Information has been received in Granville, Washington county, of the death of Lewis Deuel in Australia at the age of 94 years. He left a fortune of $3,500,000. He was a native of Granville and during the '40's was known as the champion skunk hunter and trapper of northern New York.

Deuel hunted the ill-smelling polecat for the value of its pelt. When Deuel proposed marriage to Amanda DeLong, a village belle, the latter reluctantly refused on account of the nauseating nature of Deuel's business, aggravated by the cruel comment of her friends. Deuel pleaded piteously, but in vain, and in a frenzied moment left Granville, vowing that Miss DeLong would rue the day of her refusal. He joined the exodus of gold-seekers for Australia and kept his address and good fortune in mining a secret until his death a few weeks since.

Miss DeLong died twenty-five years ago, in Granville, never having married, because, as she claimed in death, she could love none other than Lewis Deuel.

REIGN OF TERROR FOR THE REFORMERS

Political Discussions Stopped By the Execution of Shen Chien—Return to Old Conditions.

Peking, Aug. 3.—China is witnessing a return to the conditions which followed the coup d'etat of 1898. Political discussions among the Chinese, which increased during the imperial court's recent policy has suddenly stopped. The plan of the dowager empress to terrify the reformers by the execution of Shen Chien last Friday has been successful.

All the liberal Chinese particularly those who have been associated with the reformers, are in the greatest fear of arrest, and it is difficult to find a Chinaman who is willing to mention politics or Friday's tragedy, although the latter is almost the only topic of conversation among trusted friends. The officials are partly dumb. The affair is disappointing to foreigners, who had hoped that the empress dowager's association with the ladies of the legations would have a civilizing influence.

Prince Su, the most liberal of the Manchu princes, who last March issued a proclamation against incense burning to military idols because it was the chief rite during the "Boxer" troubles, is reported to have risked his office by opposing the execution of Shen Chien.

EMULATED WILD WEST COWBOYS

Rider of Burro Uses Spurs—Innovation Resented by His Steed—Slightly Wounded.

He had secured a pair of spurs and was imagining himself a wild cowboy urging his steed up and down the street at an unusual gait for the placid animal. The spurs, also were a new sensation to the donkey, and he apparently objected to their use for he managed to throw his rider to the ground. One of the would-be westerners feet became caught, in the stirrup and the boy was dragged a considerable distance. At first it was thought that his injuries were serious, but after the mud was removed it was found that he sustained a few scratches and a severe shaking up.

CIRCUS PLAYS AT APPLETON TUESDAY

Luella Forepaugh Fish Aggregation Expected to Open at That City Tomorrow.

Walker of the Erie Printing Co. who bought the entire show at the auction Saturday.

It is expected that the company will be made of practically the same performers as before. Those who have left the city are expected to return, either coming to this city, today or joining the show tomorrow. There are rumors that the management will meet with trouble from a couple of the men, who have slight grievances against them, but this cannot be substantiated.

RIVAL MACCABEES IN INTERNECINE STRIFE

Parent Body Claims the New Order is Doing Business in Indiana Without Legal Right.

Mishawaka, Ind., Aug. 3.—A peculiar contest has been precipitated in Indiana by the advent of the Modern Maccabees, a new fraternal insurance order. The old Knights of the Maccabees of the World have declared war on their youthful rival.

The new order is said to have been started by dissatisfied men who were deposed as supreme officials of the old one. John Conroy, deputy great commander of the new order, has been at work with assistants in the northern part of Indiana for several weeks, establishing subordinate tents. Officers and members of the old Maccabee order oppose this advance and Great Commander Milo Meredith has issued a letter to commanders of local tents declaring that the new society has no right to operate in Indiana. The Modern Maccabees, it is alleged, are not legally empowered to solicit members in this state, and Attorney General C. W. Miller has been appealed to. No decision, however, can be secured until September, as that official is away on a vacation.

The contest between the rival organizations of a similar title has become bitter. Deputy Conroy says similar opposition was encountered in Ohio, but that his company won in the state supreme court. Commander Meredith avers that the new order has no legal authority under Indiana insurance laws.

The last large fight in which he was reported to have been engaged took place on June 16, when he defeated the war minister of Morocco, with a loss to the latter's forces of 600 men. ## NO POPE ON FIFTH BALLOT

VOTES SCATTERED

It Is Now Believed That the Leaders Are Out of the Race.

(Special by Scripps-McRae.)
Rome, Aug. 3.—The fifth ballot of the Cardinal's conclave was held this morning, and again resulted in no choice. At 11:30 smoke was seen to be issuing from the stove pipe of the Sistine chapel.

Small Crowd Present.

As compared with last night's jam there were but few people in front of St. Peter's square this morning. Many have held their places since the voting began on Saturday and others come and go at the hours they expect results.

Scattering Votes.

It is believed that the chances of the leading candidates are now gone and that the votes being cast are for outsiders. All business at the Vatican is at a standstill until the new pope is chosen.

At the conclave of 1878 only three ballots were necessary to elect Cardinal Pecci with 40 votes.

News Leaks Out.

In the face of the discomforts, of which several cardinals have already complained, this delay in electing a Pope, notwithstanding the high temperature of Rome at this time and the restricted quarters occupied by the cardinals, is full of significance.

Rumor has it that the first two ballots resulted in giving Rampolla 20 votes, Vannutelli 12, and Gotti 7, the other votes being scattered. No matter how strict the inclosure, it would be the first time in history if some information did not leak out of the conclave.

Accepting this rumor as correct, three Italians have obtained thirty-nine votes—one more than the Italian contingent can give—and this fact may give a key to the situation.

In 1878 Cardinal Billo received seventeen votes on the first ballot and Cardinal Pecci none. And it was the latter who finally was elected. Therefore these thirty-nine doubtless will be concentrated on some other Italian cardinal, not De Curia of the papal court, because the same reasons prevail that prevented the concentration of more votes on the three cardinals mentioned.

Believe Deadlock Exists.

The talk of any one of those three withdrawing in favor of Di Pietro or any other Italian de curia is improbable, as no shifting of this kind is allowed by the regulations of the conclave.

In the rumored figures of the first day's balloting the twenty-two votes not accounted for represent the exact number of foreign cardinals sitting in the conclave.

A careful consideration of the situation by well informed personages leads to the deduction that a deadlock has resulted between the foreign and the Italian vote and that the cardinals de curia are determined not to vote for a provincial.

REVENUE CUTTER'S CREW THREATENS TO QUIT WORK

Better Rations or Change of System of Pay is Demanded by the Men Aboard the Merrill.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 3.—There is trouble aboard the United States revenue cutter Merrill. Unless some changes are made tomorrow, in the rations, or the method of handing out the pay, the little white boat, under command of Capt. A. B. Davis may remain at the dock, where it is now tied up, for two weeks, while the government enlists another crew.

It is not a strike. It is not a mutiny. It is a protest, so the men say, against being deprived of the commuted rations and having half a month's pay held back at the same time. Capt. Davis says it is not a strike, but an exhibition of pure cussedness. He also intimates that he will let the man who is stirring up all the trouble have an indefinite leave of absence without pay if he ever finds out who he is.

The men complain that rations are insufficient to sustain them at hard work. They also protest against the new ruling of the treasury department to withhold two weeks' pay, and they have refused to sign the payroll.

This Will Make Baltimore Hot. We should say that the two favorite convention cities of the continent are Boston, Massachusetts, and Denver, Colorado.—Norwood Advertiser.

MRS. HIBBARD WRITES OF A VISIT TO JAPANESE TEMPLES

THE WORKMANSHIP OF HEATHEN FANES IS EXQUISITE.

FOR WORSHIP OF BUDDHA

Customs of Doing Reverence Both Pathetic and Beautiful—Prayer to Brass Gods.

A letter from Mrs. Susie Lowell Hibbard, describing a visit to two heathen temples in Tokio, is one of the most interesting series which the readers of the Gazette have been privileged to enjoy. Mrs. Hibbard writes:

"Our first real sight seeing in Tokio was last week when we visited two interesting temples. They were both in Tokio and both Buddhist but as unlike in character as possible. The first one was at Shiba and is considered one of the most costly and most beautiful in Japan. It is in a large park with wide avenues of old pine trees, gnarled and picturesque.

"The entrance is a wide elaborately carved gate, which has been there for centuries I suppose. At each side of the gate in wire cages are two awful hideous carved monsters of wood, not made to represent anything existing. I am sure. Those are the keepers of the temple. Through this broad gate we walked up an avenue, through a court, where there were hundreds of stone lanterns, about six feet high each erected to the god by some one in memory of a deceased friend. On festival days fires are lighted in these and the gods are very happy and grant favor to the family.

A Buddhist Joke
"There are innumerable little pebbles, piled irregularly. When I asked our Japanese friend who was guiding us what they were for, he said it was considered lucky if they staid on when put there. So the people pile on all they can. Buddhist thought this boy was, (or I had better say non-Christian, for he is on the dividing line) he said it was 'only a joke' to fool the people.

"A second gate showed us into a second court, very much like the first, except that here the lanterns were more costly ones of bronze, dedicated to richer men. Here the wells of water where the worshippers used to go to wash their hands, before entering. I believe their custom does not hold any longer, although I am not sure. It does not in this temple, anyway. In this same court was a bell tower, a three-story pagoda whose curved roof stood out in graceful lines against the sky. Through another gate into the shrine proper, where it began to look dim and mysterious.

"Not until we had paid our fifteen sen and taken off our shoes could we see the sanctum sanctorum, which was too beautiful and too pathetic to try to describe. Here Japanese women and men were kneeling, after throwing their pennies down. We omitted that part of the program and then the priest showed us the wall decorations.

Walls of Gold
"The ceiling was of panels of gold done by hand and applied forty-seven times, a most exquisite handiwork. All around the upper part of the wall, like a fresco, are represented flowers and birds. There are one hundred different panels, no two alike. In queer little lacquered boxes around the side of the room, were the sacred books with Japanese signs equivalent to 'keep off the grass' on them.

"Then we went into the shrine itself. I knelt on the cold stone steps, just to see how it feels, and looked up at the golden ark-like shrines and inhaled the incense but omitted the rest of the usual ceremonies. That is all there was to the temple proper. How can they get any comfort by throwing a bit of money and saying a formal prayer to gold and brass, all as cold and lifeless as their hopes? Or by kneeling before the remnants of the sixth dynasty, which is too dead to do them either harm or good? We visited the tombs of some of the famous shoguns after this, but there was nothing which stirred me as the first had done.

"The other temple visited was visited another day. This one is at Asakusa. I was looking for a solemn and austere affair like the one at Shiba. Instead I found it a 'den of thieves.' We were surprised enough when the kurumaya put down the shafts of the kumura at the entrance of a wide stone paved street lined on either side by shops of all descriptions. I thought they could not mean that this was the entrance to a temple. We walked and walked, looking right and left at the wares displayed, and then through a gate with its hideous guards, not unlike the other ones. This gate however, was very shabby dirty and ill kept.

Release the Birds
"Doves were flying about with perfect freedom to and from their homes in the roof. Crowds of Japanese of all ranks were there while in the Shiba temple we saw only a very few Japanese and these were very clean and of the better class. We bought some rice and beans of an old woman stationed there to sell them and fed the doves who had been fed until they scorned our food. A little further along our attention was attracted by a number of poor sparrows fluttering about wildly in their cage in a vain effort to escape. As this temple is dedicated to the goddess of mercy, the releasing of these birds is an act which will accumulate merit for the agent. (The theology does not take into account the old lady who catches the sparrows.) We bought one and let him fly away to the blue above—more to see what he would do than to appease any defunct goddess. Casually we might mention that he did not stop to say anything to the goddess about it.

"Dirty and unkempt was the entrance to the shrine, for this seems to be a temple of the people, for the people and by the people. Here there were men, women and children, coming constantly to pray. They dropped their money in large slat-like arrangements for the purpose, then clapped their hands and rang a gong to attract the attention of the god and in half a minute it is all over, prayer, and all. We could hear the clink, clink, of the money as it fell, and the clap, clap of the hands as they called the goddess to listen to them. I think she must have had a 'busy' sign out on this particular morning.

A Pathetic Sight
"At the right was the saddest sight of all to me, an image with face and knees worn smooth by the friction of thousands of rubbing hands. I had heard of the custom about which I am going to tell you but until I had seen it with my own eyes I never realized its awfulness. A woman with a little child strapped to her back went up to this image over whose eyes she rubbed her hands, then rubbed her half-blind and aching eyes. Then with one of the saddest looks I have ever seen she rubbed the back of the head and shoulders of the image with her hand, and then her own and went away. A little girl, apparently with rheumatism, rubbed the idol's knees again. Eight or nine did the very same thing while I stood there. All this is done in the hope of a cure. Think of the disease that must be carried from one to the other, to say nothing of all the rest. I doubt that the poor woman went home to have aches and pains that made her forget all about the former ones. We are told that this custom is forbidden by law now but it still goes on. This shows how much hold the religion has on the common people and how little on the government.

"The rest of the show was a sort of a midway plausance outside the temple, except one thing which I almost forgot to tell you about. In a deep recess in the wall, in a half light, was an image with close wire netting in front of it. This is the place where lovers see whether or not they will be successful in their suit. This is determined by tying a strip of white paper through the wire with their thumb and finger. If they can successfully tie the knot then their suit will prosper. Their deft fingers manage to make a happy love match.
"Perhaps it should be added that in the Tokio temples the heathen ceremonies have been greatly softened and toned down by foreign influence and wide spread education."

STOCKS SHOW A PICKING UP

The Feeling of Panic in the Money Markets Has Almost Entirely Disappeared.

Discussing the speculative and industrial markets of the week and the probable developments of the immediate future, the Wall Street Journal of today says:
"There has been a marked improvement in the situation since last week. The panicky feeling that prevailed in the stock market, the preceding week disappeared. The failures of Friday, July 24, remarkably few in number considering the heavy liquidation and the sharp decline in prices, served to clear the air, and since then there has been a firmer, though quieter stock market. The failure of a small bank in Pennsylvania and of a broker in Boston caused no special comment, nor uneasiness. Few signs developed that the depression in Wall Street had materially affected the general business situation. On the contrary, all reports indicated an active movement in trade, considering the season and the railroad earnings continued to reflect the continuing prosperity of the country. The rain has improved the prospects for corn.

"Notwithstanding the recent experiences in the stock market, the volume of transactions continued fairly large, being for stocks only slightly less than the total for the corresponding week last year. An average of over 500,000 shares a day for six days of business is by no means unsatisfactory in the last week of July and such an average a few years ago would have been regarded as proof of extraordinary activity. The average price of twenty leading railway stocks which on Saturday, July 25, touched the new point of 95, advanced to 97.08 on Tuesday, and reached 96.45 on Friday, closing at 96.37. The average price of twelve leading industrial stocks, which on Saturday, July 25, was 49.03, advanced to 51.52 on Tuesday, reaching to 50.76 on Friday, and closing Saturday at 50.75.

Money Market
"In the money market the feature of interest has been a slight easing up of the rate for six months money, and the extreme ease of call money, which at one time touched as low as 1 per cent, and at no time during the week, exceeded 3 per cent. The weakness of call money is due to the fact that so many exchange houses have provided themselves for the rest of the year with time money and with a reduced speculation, the demand for call money is much less active. Its weakness is in some measure responsible for the shading in the rate for a long time money to 5 1/2 per cent. The trust companies not being subject to the crop-moving demands, like the national banks were more liberal in their offerings of time money, at the reduced rate than the banks. The money situation was improved by the payment of the remainder of the Pennsylvania loan and by the gain of over $5,000,000 by the banks from the movement of currency. It is too early yet to measure the probable volume of the crop-moving demand, but the banks are preparing for a demand fully equal to that of former years.

Crop Outlook
"The crop situation has been improved by rains which were much needed for the growing corn. Reports as to the cotton crops were feeble. There were less satisfactory statements as to spring wheat. The trade conditions were feeble, and business men generally are looking forward to a continuance of activity during the rest of the year. There is more or less discussion as to the possible effect on business, but as yet its most pronounced effect has been in increasing the hesitation in the corn and iron trade. The disposition in the West is to retard the Wall street situation, as an exception to the prevailing prosperity. The most serious feature of the trade situation is the continued high price of raw cotton which produces a state of paralysis in the market for cotton goods.

"The labor conditions are improving. The iron and steel industries display some hesitation, due perhaps, in part to the developments in the stock market, thus being the only trade of which this could be said. There is some conservatism displayed by buyers and prices in some cases have shown a declining tendency, but there is no doubt that this great industry continues to enjoy market prosperity. The advance orders for steel rails in 1904, constitute one-third of the capacity of the plants. The dry goods trade outside of the effect of the corner in cotton, is doing well. There has been a satisfactory opening of the fall business and the retail trade is active for the summer months. Wheat has been firm on reports as to the condition of the wheat crop in the northern section and also up on the prospect of a full foreign demand, owing to the poor condition of the European crop.

HOW NEW POPE WILL BE CHOSEN

American Vicar General Issues a Pamphlet Giving the Details of the Conclave.

The Very Reverend Ferdinand Brossart, vicar general of the diocese of Covington, and an authority on canonical laws, has just issued a pamphlet on "The Pope and His Election," in which he gives in full the canonical method of electing the pontiff. According to Vicar General Brossart no cardinal may vote for himself. Every cardinal in the conclave must take part in the election under penalty of excommunication.

The balloting takes place twice, daily, and this also under pain of excommunication. The balloting occurs in the morning and again in the afternoon. The pamphlet affirms the right of veto by the powers but says it can be exercised only once on behalf of each potentate. The veto consists in the commission given by a potentate to a cardinal, to object to a persona non grata.

The pope-elect is at liberty to decline. If he does the holy see is again declared vacant. If he accepts, he changes his name at once, as was done for St. Peter, the first pope, by Christ, who, when he made Simon his vicar on earth, changed his name to Peter, which means, "the rock." The name has never been assumed by any of his successors, no doubt out of reverence of the divine nomination.

The canonical modes of election are: By quasi-inspiration—This consists in the unanimous declaration of one candidate as the pope. By compromise—This consists in the unanimous selection by the cardinals of a committee to which they transfer the right of election and for which they prescribe regulations. By ballot or scrutiny—This consists in each elector giving his vote in a sealed ballot. The one, who with the exclusion of his own ballot, receives a two-thirds vote of all the cardinals, is elected.

The election by scrutiny may take place with or without accession, but the latter is the common mode. The teller counts the votes, and if one person has received exactly two-thirds, his own ballot is opened to ascertain whether he voted for himself. If he did, the election is invalid. Should he have one more vote than the two-thirds, the opening of the ballot is not necessary, and he is declared elected.

If the counting of the ballot denotes no election, then the accession must take place. Though the ballots remain as they were, the cardinals by a repeated vote with closed ballots, accede or pass over to a candidate who has received at least one valid vote. The vote of accession differs from that of scrutiny only in that the formula contains "accede" instead of "eligio." No one is obliged to vote by accession, but he must deposit his ballot, in which he must write: "I accede to no one." If from the votes of scrutiny, added to those of accession, there results no two-thirds majority, the ballots are burned after being inspected.

THE HOME MAKER OR SPECULATOR?

LAWS GOVERNING ARID SECTIONS HARMFUL.

A CHANCE FOR INVESTMENT

Lauds Profitable for Individual, But the People as a Whole Are the Losers.

Shall the nation's great domain of arid lands and the nation's money, be used to enrich a comparatively few greedy individuals, or shall they be used to furnish security and happiness for millions of men, women and children?
Uncle Sam is still rich enough to give us all a farm. And an irrigated farm, at that. It is not a dream but a fact that the present population of the United States can be duplicated on the arid public domain in the West.

This can be done without making new competitors for those already engaged in agricultural pursuits in the East and in the South. On the other hand, this wonderful act of planting a new nation, in what is now all but an unbroken wilderness will confer enormous benefits on those sections which are already covered with farms, factories and towns.

The subjugation and settlement of the empire of public lands means that every factory wheel in the United States must whirl faster, that every banking house must handle more money and that every railroad must transport more passengers and freight. This, in turn, means a larger and busier population in every Eastern and Southern town, and that, of course, will quicken and enlarge the demand for all the products of the soil in the older sections of the country.

Western Irrigation
In the meantime, that which is grown from the soil to be conquered by irrigation in the West will go almost exclusively to the feeding of new home-markets to be created within the arid region itself and to the satisfaction of unlimited demands in the Orient and frozen North.

Congress has decreed that the great policy of national irrigation, shall be entered upon without delay. Already the engineers and surveyors are doing their work and five great projects have been reported favorably to the Interior Department. Only about $7,000,000 are required to carry all five to completion and the money is in the treasury awaiting the call. But upon the threshold of the greatest constructive policy to which this nation ever set its hand, a new and appalling obstacle is encountered.

Almost every acre of these lands which the nation is about to prepare for the swarming of a home-building population may, under existing laws, be stolen and used as the basis of a profitable speculation. And those who desire to secure these lands for speculative purposes are strong enough to tie the hands of Congress until the deed shall have been done. This, too, in spite of the fact the president of the United States has urged the repeal of these iniquitous land laws as something, which is vital to the success of the national irrigation policy.

Welfare of Country
Shall the nation's land then, and the nation's money by used to enrich a comparatively few greedy individuals, or shall they be used to furnish security and happiness for millions of men, women and children?

This is the question which must be answered when Congress meets again. The answer depends absolutely upon the will of the people as it shall be made known to their representatives at Washington. No power on earth, except the power of an aroused and indignant public opinion can save the arid region from falling prey to the speculators who are alive to their opportunity while the people are asleep.

In his last message, the President recommended the repeal of the Desert Land Law of the commutation clause of the Homestead Law, and of the Timber and Stone act. These are the provisions of existing statutes under which absolutely the most valuable property now owned by the American people is being systematically absorbed into private ownership by those who cannot use it, but who propose to sell it at enormous profit to real home-seekers when the nation shall have multiplied its value an hundred-fold by means of irrigation.

The nation has land for every man who will make his home upon it in good faith—who will break the sod, plant crops, build a house, and settle down to support his family from the soil. But the nation has no land—at least, it ought to have none—for the man who merely seeks to forestall the actual settler and sell out to him at a profit, or become a landlord collecting income from his tenants.

Improvement of Land
Under present laws millions of acres are being taken by those who have no thought of breaking the soil, planting crops, or building homes. They are mere adventurers and speculators.

The Desert Land Law gives them a chance to obtain for a song, without residence and without cultivation, 320 acres of the richest soil on earth—enough for sixteen families. The commutation clause of the Homestead Law gives them a chance to take up 160 acres with but the barest pretence of residence, and that for only fourteen months. The Timber and Stone Act enables them to acquire forests and quarries for a bagatelle and to hold them for speculative advances.

Frank Stockton left the hero of his famous tale hesitating before two doors. If he opened one, it meant life and happiness; if the other death. And the question was never answered—"the Lady or the Tiger?"

Uncle Sam stands at the door of the arid region. His foot is on the threshold, his hand is at the latch. Shall it be the home maker or the speculator? Shall it be life and happiness for millions, or a riot and a carnival of speculation at the expense of the people?

There is but one way to answer the question in the interest of the nation's welfare. That is to repeal the vicious provisions of the existing land laws in accordance with the president's recommendation.
WILLIAM E. SMYTHE.

Northwestern Brakeman Slips as He Is Catching Caboose, at Milton Junction.

While attempting to mount the caboose of a freight train Saturday morning, Ben Dixon, a North-Western road brakeman, had his foot badly mashed under the wheels of the car. The accident occurred at Milton Junction, and the injured man was brought to this city where he was placed under the care of a surgeon at the Palmer Memorial hospital. The train which he attempted to mount was moving so rapidly that his foot was pulled around and under the wheel, crushing the toes and part of the foot.

Clouds of Smoke Resolve Themselves Into Swarms of Insects—No Blaze To Be Found.

Dense clouds of smoke or what appeared to be clouds of smoke, were seen issuing from the steeple of the Congregational church last evening, and the fire department were given their first run in three weeks. When they reached the spot the smoke had vanished and the most careful scrutiny failed to reveal either flames or smoke although Chief Klein climbed with his lantern to within fifteen feet of the apex of the steeple. So many persons declared that they had seen the smoke that it was impossible to regard the alarm as a "fake" pure and simple, so the chief decided that a swarm of bees or a host of flies must have been mistaken in the twilight for smoke.

WANTS $1,800 FOR A FLOODED CELLAR

Mrs. Kate Mattick Asks Damages for Alleged Injuries Due to Defective Sewer.

Damages to the amount of $1,800 are claimed by Mrs. Kate Mattick, owner of the Fountain House, for injuries alleged to have been done to her property by defective sewers. Her claim will be presented to the common council this evening. Since May 9, 1902 according to her statement, her property has been flooded six times by water which the sewers proved inadequate to carry off. The level of the street at this point is above the level of her lawn, and the latter is covered with water at the time of heavy rains. $300 is claimed for each time her cellar was flooded.

SUGAR IMPORTATIONS

More than 5 million pounds of sugar valued at 100 million dollars was brought into the United States in the fiscal year just ended. This is a larger importation of sugar than at any preceding year in the history of the country, and the value is greater than in any preceding year, except the importations of 1891, 1893 and 1894. These figures include the sugar brought from Porto Rico and the Hawaiian Islands; and while the figures of the shipments from Porto Rico and the Hawaiian Islands are not in the official statement of imports, they are properly included in the statement to show the quantity of sugar coming into the United States. The total number of pounds of sugar brought into the United States during the year was as shown by the records of the Department of Commerce and Labor through its Bureau of Statistics, 5,217,077,034, while in no earlier year in the history of the country, has the importation of sugar ever reached 5 billion pounds.

The largest importation of any earlier year was that of 1897 when the total was 4,918,905,733 pounds. Adding to the enormous importation of 1903, 600 million pounds as the domestic production, would give a total sugar supply of 5,817 million pounds for the year, or sufficient to furnish an average of 72 pounds for each individual in the United States estimating the present population at 80 million.

The record of sugar importations for the year differs materially in certain aspects from that of earlier years. The total importation of beet sugar during the year was only 87 million pounds against 255 millions in the fiscal year 1902 and 908 millions in the fiscal year 1901. Cane sugar of course composed the remainder and the cane sugar importations of the fiscal year, exclusive of that brought from Porto Rico and the Hawaiian Islands amounted to 4,075 million pounds against 2,685 millions in the fiscal year 1902 and 2,956 millions in 1901. From Porto Rico the total sugar brought into the United States amounted to $20,143,503 pounds, valued at $7,466,579, and from the Hawaiian Islands, 774,825,420 pounds, valued at $25,310,684. Thus, the total quantity of sugar supplied by Porto Rico and the Hawaiian Islands amounted to one billion pounds or about one-fifth of the total brought into the country. Its value being nearly 33 million dollars.

Another marked characteristic of the year's production of sugar is the fact that the price of sugar brought from foreign countries has averaged lower than in any preceding year. The official statements of the Bureau of Statistics have for many years shown the average cost per pound in foreign countries of the sugar imported. This average cost was in 1872 and 1873 over 5 cents per pound from that period it ranged downward averaging four and a fraction cents per pound, until 1883 when the cost first fell below 4 cents, being in 1884, 3.5 cents per pound. From that date forward it ranged downward, in some years falling below three cents per pound, the figure for 1894 being 2.9 cents as the year's average rate of cost. By 1901, the movement was still slowly downward, the average rate for 1901 being 2.3 cents per pound, while in 1902, the average cost was 1.82 per pound, and in the fiscal year just ended, the average cost in the country of production of sugar imported from foreign countries was 1.71 cents per pound which is lower than in any preceding year.

PRESS COMMENT

Marquette Eagle: The wise business man looks after his advertisements in the dull season when people will buy, only when coaxed.

Waupun Leader: The Milwaukee horse show is over and it is still an open question whether the lady or the horse was the more attractive.

Milwaukee Journal: The Superior Leader says that "men are full of microbes." We thought La Follette was, but didn't understand the others were thus afflicted.

Marquette Star: Gov. La Follette for third term, the United States senatorship and the vice presidency. What's the matter with Little Bob for president, after Roosevelt?

Milwaukee News: The employees of the government printing office have decided not to strike. Most of them had too hard a time in getting in to quit without the assistance of a boost.

Waupun Leader: The editorial pages of some country newspapers read as if they were written mainly to interest the brethren on their exchange list instead of their subscribers.

Merrill Advocate: While La Follette and Bryan are enjoying their summer vacation, the trusts are being smashed in Wall street; the smashing last week amounted to almost a panic.

Merrill Advocate: If Bab and Bob are going to lead the two factions, the papers will have to mind their A's and O's instead of their P's and Q's. It might bring about harmony, if they didn't.

Milwaukee Free Press: When you come to think about it next year looks like a great year for some democrat to run for governor of Wisconsin, now, doesn't it? There are about three democrat papers in the state that think they can see a chance in 1904.—The Waukesha Dispatch, The Neenah Times and the Appleton Crescent. They are never in doubt about winning every election that comes along.

Fond du Lac Commonwealth: The suggestion to the effect that former Congressman Cook is to be the administration candidate for governor, is likely premature. The gentleman who is manipulating the deal is hardly ready to show his hand so early in the game.

Milwaukee Wisconsin: The story that the favorite wife of the emperor of Korea is the daughter of a missionary who formerly resided at Appleton, Wis., is vigorously denied. Outside of Utah, American girls have always insisted upon undisputed sway over the heart of the masculine person or personage to whom they resign their own.

Chicago Inter Ocean: One way to correct the evil would be to deport the immigrants who have entered the country on forged passports and naturalization papers.

Chicago News: Sir Thomas may observe that if the Constitution is to follow the flag it will have to be a speedy piece of bunting.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: Eleven deaths in St. Louis since the Fourth from toy pistol lockjaw ought to serve as a conclusive warning. But will it?

Buffalo Courier: Much of the disorder in the country no doubt is directly attributable to popular conviction that the law is often inadequate to reach or fully punish its violators, and that still more frequently it is not fearlessly and fairly administered by incorruptible men on the bench. The fact will bear constant repetition that if the courts are to be respected they must deserve respect.

Boston Herald: Could Pocahontas, who saved the life of the original John Smith, read the page after page of them who now appear in Boston's new city directory, she would feel prouder than ever of her achievement.

The REASON WHY

Many of our coffee and tea patrons have asked us how it is that we can afford to sell such an excellent grade of coffee at 25 cents per pound and such a fine Jap Tea at 50c. The reason is plain and simple enough. We are satisfied with a very small profit. Many stores have for years been selling no better Mocha and Java Blend of coffee for 35 cents. We still say:

The Best 25c coffee in the City.

The Best 50c Tea in the City.

TOBACCO GROWTH DELAYED A WEEK

PLANTS NOT ADVANCED AS IN OTHER YEARS.

TOPPING IS NOT COMPLETED

Sales Have Not Reached Any Large
Figures—Sweating Has Progressed Well of Late.

"The growth of the local tobacco crop has been only fair this week," said Mr. Heddles on Saturday. The plants gained well during the first part of the week but the cool weather the last few days retarded the increase in size. Topping has not yet become general and is finished only in the earliest set fields. The general crop is almost a week behind this summer but is of quite uniform size and appears well and capable of turning out a good crop later on. So far there has been very little if any of the usual insects and no loss has been occasioned by strong winds, hail or rain. Warehouse men say that the hot weather of the past few weeks has given the crop of '02 a good sweat and they can now tell what the crop will be later.

The second sweat of the '01 crop is leaving it in excellent condition. The sales of cured goods continue very small in number and are confined mostly to small lots to manufacturers, however at the Green warehouses three carloads were shipped to New York late in the week. From Evansville, Eau Claire county and at Brodhead about two hundred cases were secured by L. B. Carle.

Near Edgerton, the early set plants have come to maturity rapidly and topping in these lots has been very general. The shipments out of storage from Edgerton to all points have amounted to 445 cases.

The New York market is apparently in its mid-summer vacation. Whatever business transpires is for immediate consumption, and those factories that are short of stock have to hustle very lively to get any supply. There are no bargains in the market and prices for all types of leaf show a tendency to advance. The domestic wrapper leaf market has not become easier on account of the reported damage by the hail storms visiting this part of the Connecticut tobacco growing region. In addition to last year's poor and defective crop, this year's growth has been damaged to any large extent, the domestic wrapper leaf question would indeed become a sore one. Luckily there is an ample supply of very available Sumatra on hand. The Havana situation is likely a difficult one. Never before in the history of the trade have such early visits been made by buyers to Cuba as this year and never before has the new crop of Vuelas been gobbled up so early as this season. It is calculated that by September the market in Cuba will be cleaned out, while in former years buyers from the North did not venture down before November.—Journal.

From the Islands.
A bulletin has been prepared by the bureau of insular affairs of the U. S. war department, showing the commerce of the Philippine Islands since the records first passed into the hands of the American military forces in July, 1898. It is thus possible, for the first time since the islands were taken over to learn the exact exports of the islands by months, since July 1898. From the bulletin it would seem that the concern with which the development of tobacco growing in the Philippines has been watched by the U. S. is fully justified by the high hopes Manila customs officials express with regard to the future of the trade. According to the bulletin, the tobacco trade in the islands is capable of great improvement. The Philippines on account of the excellence and cheapness of its products can compete in this industry with more advanced countries. Since the abolition of the monopoly, the growing of Philippine tobacco has increased in an extraordinary degree, both in the quantity and quality of its products. Many growers in the islands use modern machinery. While the exports to the U. S. so far have been small, it is believed they will soon be increased. Up to June 1902, the share of the U. S. in the Philippine tobacco trade never exceeded $5,000 in any half yearly period. In June 1902 the total was $8,000, and in the ensuing year this figure was nearly doubled, as the trade amounted to $15,500. The aggregate for the year was $52,000. The increase in the shipments to this country is considered to have been largely due to the reduction of 25 per cent. in the tariff, which took effect about a year ago.—American Agriculturist.

JOYCE HEARING WAS POSTPONED

ALLEGED MURDERER WILL BE EXAMINED NEXT WEEK.

WAIT FOR DISTRICT ATTORNEY

People Who Wish To Hear Examination Were Disappointed—Judge Fines Drunks.

Expectation that Tom Joyce would be examined regarding the murder of Herman Zimmerman brought out a large throng to the municipal court room this morning. It was suggested that if interest continues at the same rate the seating capacity will need to be doubled. Every chair was occupied and a score were standing around the sides of the room. After all the excited anticipation which the crowd enjoyed they were compelled to return to their homes disappointed. The examination was postponed until the return of District Attorney W. A. Jackson. Case Adjourned.

Joyce was brought into the court room at ten o'clock. In the custody of Turnkey Roy Graves. His appearance was neither that of a criminal nor of a man who looked with dread upon the examination he expected to undergo. No one in the room seemed as little aware of the solemnity of the occasion as he.

When the case was called, A. A. Jackson, who appeared for the district attorney, asked that the hearing be continued to Tuesday, August 11, in order that the district attorney might be present to conduct the examination. The case was accordingly continued with the understanding that the examination take place on that day without further postponement. T. S. Nolan, who appeared for Joyce, stated that the latter wished no unnecessary delay.

Drunks Were Fined
While the disappointed onlookers were filing out, Chief Hogan made complaint against some men who had spent the night in the lockup, and they were brought in before Judge Fildes. Louis O'Rourke was given a term of five days in the county jail at hard labor. O'Rourke had previously promised to leave the city, but urged that he had been sick and unable to go to work. Joseph Mulloney was sent to the jail for being drunk on Sunday and disturbing the entire neighborhood in which he lives.

About twenty-five members of the club attended the outing, travelling six or seven miles up the river, where the dinner was served.

Young Ladies Picnicked: The Young Ladies' Sodality of St. Mary's church went to Lake Koshkonong yesterday, where they spent the day at Hoard's. About thirty young ladies comprised the party, making the trip in wagonettes. The return was made about nine o'clock in the evening.

Conductor Dulin's Testimonial...

For the past year I have been troubled with a bad case of dandruff. October last, I started to treat it with first one dandruff cure and then another but the dandruff seemed to get worse instead of better. Some weeks ago I commenced using Wetmore's Improved Hair Tonic, thoroughly massaging the scalp two or three times a week and can truthfully say that I have not a particle of dandruff in my hair. I gladly endorse Wetmore's Hair Tonic and consider it the best hair preparation on the market today.—J. J. DULIN, 9 S. Academy street, Janesville, Wis.

INJUNCTION IN BELOIT STRIKE

JUDGE DUNWIDDIE ENJOINS OFFICERS OF SOCIETY.

MAY NOT DISTRIBUTE FUNDS

Strikers Are Alleged To Have No Connection with Berlin Mutual Aid Society.

Judge Dunwiddie issued a second injunction in connection with the Beloit labor difficulties Saturday. Its effect was to prevent the distribution of funds in the possession of the Berlin Mutual Aid society among those, who, it is alleged, severed their connection with the society, when they left the employ of the Berlin Machine Works. The injunction was sought by members of the society who are not among the strikers.

Intended to Disband
It is set forth in the injunction that only those who are employees of the Berlin Machine Works are qualified to be members of the society, and that the strikers are not longer entitled to determine what disposition shall be made of the funds. It is further set forth that it has been the intention of former officers of the society, who are now strikers, to disband and distribute the funds, about two hundred dollars, in all.

Illegal to Divide Money
In proof of the latter statement it is declared that an advertisement in the Beloit Daily News announces the intention of the officers to divide the money. This, it is claimed, cannot lawfully be done without the vote of the present members. On these grounds the injunction was granted by Judge Dunwiddie restraining the alleged former officers of the society from distributing or disposing of the money in the hands of the organization.

A Game of Bluff At Chattanooga

A Fortieth Anniversary War Story

August 16-21, 1863

(Copyright, 1903, by G. L. Kilmer.)

STRATEGY doesn't destroy armies. That must be done by fighting. But strategy often selects the battlefield and indirectly wins a victory. The fierce combat of Chickamauga was set down to happen in the book of fate by a campaign of strategy which ended at Tullahoma, Tenn., July 4, 1863.

The Confederate Army of the Tennessee had marched northward from Chattanooga in midsummer, 1862, under General Braxton Bragg to invade the state of Kentucky. After two fruitless battles at Perryville, Ky., and Murfreesboro, Tenn., midsummer, 1863, saw it fling back to Chattanooga, followed by its old enemy of Perryville and Murfreesboro, the Army of the Cumberland. The contest in the west between these two forces was a parallel to that between the Army of Northern Virginia and the Army of the Potomac in the east, a continuous duel for position. Defeated and turned back homeward in his march to Kentucky, Bragg clung to central Tennessee as a base for a new attempt to cross the Ohio and to protect Chattanooga, the Richmond of the west.

It was no fault of Bragg that the spring and summer of 1863 passed without a battle to a finish in central Tennessee. He was ready to fight—to fight on ground of his own choosing. Rosecrans was a ready fighter, but he too, wanted to choose the battle ground. Bragg lay behind fortified lines at Tullahoma, and Rosecrans moved his guns and battalions around him and gave him no choice but to vacate the works and fight in the open or retreat for the third time within a year.

Bragg retreated to Chattanooga, where he could place rivers and mountains between his army and the foe. The Sequatchie river, the Cumberland mountains and the Tennessee river were barriers facing Rosecrans when he broke camp on the Tullahoma line Aug. 16 to keep in touch with Bragg. Having opened the campaign with a brilliant stroke of strategy, the Federal commander decided to try it a second time even at the risk of being detected in repeating himself.

Bragg began to fortify Chattanooga against attack by building earthworks on Mission ridge, behind the city. He also sent his cavalry into the mountain passes to head off Rosecrans and fortified the crossings of the Tennessee above and below Chattanooga. Nature had done much to make the roads from Tullahoma to Chattanooga impossible for an army with active foes in front. It was only necessary for Bragg to fill up the gaps and Chattanooga was safe. "The Tennessee will be taken as our line," said Bragg.

Rosecrans waited over a month for nature to do a good turn for the attacking army. The corn would ripen about the middle of August, and as the region was generally sterile and the mountain roads of the roughest it would be a boon to the troops to find sustenance by the wayside. Bragg took it for granted that his enemy would come down upon him through the Sequatchie valley, a rich and broad highway. He concentrated all his strength to defend that route, and Rosecrans encouraged the policy of his antagonist by sending an army corps through the valley to make a feint of attack on Chattanooga from the north.

On Aug. 20 Bragg saw the Federals filing through the passes of the Cumberland mountain toward Chattanooga and prepared to fight. Next day scouts brought word that the Federals had crossed the Tennessee river on the rear of his army and were moving south toward his line of railroad communications with the interior of the Confederacy.

This last bit of news was confirmed by the sound of cannon shot at Chattanooga. General J. T. Wilder's Federal cavalry had galloped up to the bank of the Tennessee opposite the town and began tossing shells into the streets. It was fast day, and the churches were filled with worshippers. One noted pastor had just opened prayer when the first shell whistled past the windows. He continued the invocation calmly to the end, but on opening his eyes found that he had few listeners. The troops in the place retired to the fortified hills, and for hours Chattanooga was helpless under the guns of the enemy.

Again Bragg had been outgeneraled. The enemy was in his rear and Chattanooga in danger. This was the first time a gun had been fired at the great Confederate depot of the west. Federal armies had more than once turned their heads toward that point, but never before came to a collision with its defenders. Chattanooga was the gateway of the rich region between the Mississippi and the Atlantic bordering upon the gulf. It was mountain locked and at a glance seemed beyond conquest. Had it been wrested from the Confederates in 1862 after the fall of Donelson and the battle of Shiloh the life of the Confederacy would have been cut short a year and Vicksburg would never have figured in the great contest.

Chattanooga stood guard over the railways which banded the whole southern tier of Confederate states together, welding Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia to the Carolinas. Vicksburg had been able to hold out solely because Chattanooga was behind it. With Vicksburg taken, Chattanooga was the next bulwark in the chain of southern defenses to be reduced if the Federals were to control the west. Rosecrans counted upon help from Grant's army, which had conquered Vicksburg. But Grant had other plans.

Rosecrans' march upon Chattanooga from the west left one weak point in the campaign plan. The upper Tennessee valley from Chattanooga northward to Knoxville, guarded on the west by the Cumberland mountains, was still open to the Confederates. This valley connected Chattanooga with Virginia and Bragg's army with the army of Robert E. Lee. Moreover it gave Bragg an open road to Kentucky if he chose to offset Rosecrans' march southward by a second invasion across the Ohio. Bragg had maintained a strong division at Knoxville under Buckner to keep the road open.

Army movements are sometimes, though not often, surrounded with mystery which completely baffles the keenest leader of the opposition. Bragg knew he was to be attacked at Chattanooga or in that vicinity by Rosecrans. He knew he might be attacked also by Grant with the Vicksburg army, either in conjunction with Rosecrans or independent of him. These threatening attacks must come from the west. While watching them the last days in August a new and wholly unlooked for foe took the field in east Tennessee, heading for Knoxville. The new foe was a new Federal army under General Burnside.

Had Burnside's march been revealed to Bragg a few days earlier he might have ignored Rosecrans toiling through the mountains and sent help to Buckner to hold Knoxville, for the possession of that point gave the Confederates railroad connection between Chattanooga and Virginia direct. The news from Knoxville, however, did not reach Chattanooga until Rosecrans had crossed the Tennessee river into Georgia and was leading for Dalton, on the railroad in rear of Chattanooga. Bragg was not to be allowed to fight for Chattanooga from behind the defenses he had built with great care, but must march out and fight in the open, and that not merely to save Chattanooga, but to save his army from ruin. Should Rosecrans plant his army in the passes of the mountains of north Georgia behind Bragg the Confederate would be in a trap. He couldn't feed his army with Tennessee closed to him and Georgia cut off. He couldn't retreat, for mountains hedged him about—mountains and Federal armies.

A little more activity on the part of General Meade, who was confronting Lee in Virginia, and Bragg's army would have been smashed by Rosecrans in the passes of north Georgia or it would have been cooped up in Chattanooga. Help was to come to Bragg in the crisis Rosecrans was weaving about him from faroff Virginia and that not by the short cut through east Tennessee via Knoxville for Burnside had closed that route—but the round-about course of the Carolinas.

Still another combination for the destruction of Bragg and Chattanooga was figured out on paper while Rosecrans was toiling through the mountains the last weeks in August. Grant proposed to take his Vicksburg army south, reduce Mobile and then march north into the interior of Georgia behind Bragg, cutting the Confederacy in two the second time. This plan was overruled in Washington. Had it been begun, even not to say carried through, Chickamauga would never have been fought. In the event of Grant's attacking Mobile Rosecrans would have been given the task of threatening Chattanooga to keep Bragg busy, another case of one army holding the head of the enemy while another strikes his legs.

Left to his own devices, Rosecrans pounded Chattanooga with shells and passed his army around it to the rear, compelling Bragg to follow and leave Chattanooga empty. Burnside was too far away to march in, and Grant's army was temporarily broken up.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

VAST SULPHUR MINE.

It Lies in the Crater of Popocatepetl in Mexico.

The Deposits Are of a Higher Commercial Value Than Any Others That Are Known and Are Almost Inexhaustible.

A mine on a mountain top. A climb of over three miles up, up, up, through the heavy timber to the snow line, and then on, and on, until the rugged edges of the crater of Popocatepetl are reached, and below in the vast bowl of the extinct crater lies our mine. Sulphur of the purest quality and in inexhaustible quantities, waiting for intrepid, ingenious, enterprising man to carry it forth to the markets of the world. The sulphur found here is of higher commercial value than that which is secured from Mount Etna, being free from both iron and arsenic.

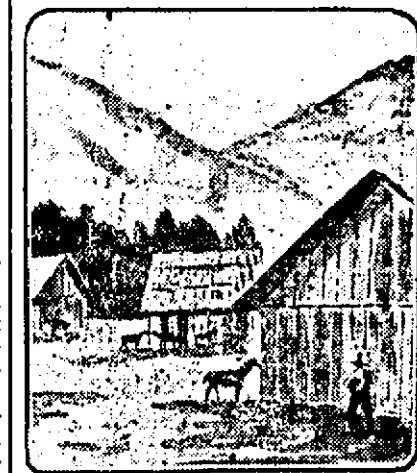

Popocatepetl rears its snow-capped head to the southeast of the City of Mexico. A journey of 45 miles by rail brings us to Amecameca, where horses are secured for the ride up the mountainside to the halfway house. With guides, which are easy to obtain, the long climb to the top is now begun. On the summit of the volcano are two peaks, the highest of which is practically inaccessible; the other is known by the name of "Espinoza del Diablo." Spine of the Devil, a name which may have been given because of the fear of the ancient Aztecs, who believe the crater to be the abode of the wicked spirits of departed rulers. For this reason, the natives could never be induced to climb the mountain, and soldiers under the Spanish general, Cortes, were the first to reach the summit and secure sulphur, of which the adventurers stood in need for the making of gunpowder. The trip was a perilous one, and the soldiers drew lots to see who should be lowered into the crater to secure the coveted article.

The deposits at the present time are worked on a very small scale by Indians, but modern engineering methods and plenty of American capital are soon to waken the old mountain to twentieth century energy. Capt. Charles Holt, representative of a syndicate, has been looking over the ground, and recently a New York capitalist, Mr. Samuel Green, spent a night in the crater. The first plan probably will be the building of an aerial cable train to the summit over the rim and down into the crater. At present this line would only run to the level of the floor of the crater, and a tunnel constructed through the side of the mountain. This will cost about $50,000. Then in connection with this line, at the summit of the mountain, a railroad has been projected to run from Tlaxcala, at the base of the mountain, to Amecameca, which, with the necessary refineries, will take half a million dollars.

Gen. Sanchez Ochoa, chief of the department of military engineers of Mexico, is the owner of Popocatepetl. Besides the value of the sulphur deposits, there are almost inexhaustible forests, and numerous waterfalls, from which may be developed great electrical energy. Gen. Ochoa acquired title to the mountain by "denouncing" the summit as a mineral prospect and by purchase of lands comprising the sides and base. He is a popular and enterprising Mexican, about 65 years of age. His home is in Mexico City, where he has lived for the past 35 years. Yankee thrift and capital have attracted the general, and the Yankee dollar is soon to transform his lofty possessions into a paying possession.

WOOLING TIME AMONG BIRDS.

Varied Methods of Courtship That Are Employed.

Woooling time brings to the front the comical side of bird life, and methods are as varied among our feathered neighbors as among ourselves. The extremes of dignified courtship and disreputable scurrilousness were shown by two well-known birds, when the presence of a rival intensified affairs. Two purple finches, suitors for the favor of the same sparrow-like maiden, placed themselves on each side about a foot from her and offered a musical contest. First one burst into a rapturous song, flying up into the air, feathers fluffed out and snowy breast and rosy shoulders more lovely than ever.

The solo finished, he dropped back to his perch and politely waited while his rival poured out his madrigal. This alternate display continued several minutes, and apparently the umpire found it hard to choose, for she evaded decision by taking flight—both suitors following. Different was the method of two orchard Orioles, one in the immature plumage of the second year, the other in the full glory of maturity.

This was a wrangle, accompanied by avian vituperation from beginning to end. If the theory of selection by fine dress be true, decision should have been easy, but after a whole day's trial the fair one ended it by a truly feminine scorn of theories, eloping with her plainer suitor, leaving the gorgeous elder to console himself with another bride—which he did before the sun went down.—Collier's Weekly.

What the Fly Was Doing.
A certain splinter in Indianapolis, who has lived alone in her beautiful and stately home for many years, is one of the city's most notable housewives. No childish fingers have ever marred the pristine brilliancy of her mirrors and windows or played havoc with the handsome bronzes and vases in the daintily cared-for dining room. At the home of her brother, where seven children romp from morning until night, as may be imagined, the same exquisite perfection of housekeeping is impossible. One day her small niece returned home after a tea party at auntie's, and in an awed voice said: "Mamma, I saw a fly in Aunt Maria's house, but (thoughtfully) it was washing itself."—Indianapolis Journal.

Not English, You Know.
The other morning a man who, from his dress and speech, had the appearance of being an Englishman, entered a Broad street cafe and, approaching the bar, asked for a "half and half."

It seems the bartender was a young man, new to the business, but he did the best he knew how, and set out the drink. The customer smiled, looked critically at the beverage, tasted it, and then asked, "Where is the porter?"

"Out washing the windows, sir," cheerfully responded the bartender.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Korean government has ordered that all Koreans, without regard to rank or class, should not wear clothes except of a blue or dark color.

A GREAT TRUTH.

How It Has Spread From Home to Home in Janesville

In every part of Janesville; in the homes of the wealthy, in the humble abode of the man of toil, 'tis now a well-known fact—a great truth—that Doan's Kidney Pills have brought more comfort to backache sufferers and cured more sick kidneys than any medicine of modern times.

Mr. H. P. Hanson of 103 Pleasant St., engineer employed at the Janesville Machine Co., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills did me all the good that could be expected and I recommend them to any one who may be troubled with lame back or any kidney disorder. After procuring them at the People's Drug Store I took them and felt better, sleep better, my back did not ache like it did, and I did not rise in the morning with a lame and sore back. I suffered from these symptoms for four or five years and I was more than pleased at the results obtained from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills."

DOUBLE MYSTERY IN MICHIGAN CASE

BOTH HEIRS TO GERMAN ESTATE

Mother insists Her Son Was Murdered and Accuses Neighbor of Committing Crime, but She Is Unable to Secure Arrest.

Battle Creek, Mich., Aug. 3.—The disappearance of Albert Cole from his home in Marshall, a small town near here, and a mysterious attack on his sister, Mrs. May Wood, a resident of this city, are problems that are puzzling the authorities in this section.

The brother and sister each had received an unexpected bequest of $20,000 from their grandfather in Germany recently, and this circumstance is taken to have some connection with the two mysteries.

Cole's mother insists the youth was murdered and she names a neighbor as her son's slayer. She has gone so far as to ask a warrant for the man's arrest, but it was refused, as she had no tangible evidence to sustain her charge.

Throw Acid on Woman.

The police of this city had been notified of Cole's disappearance and were working on the case for several days, when the affair was complicated Saturday night by the attack on Mrs. Wood. The woman was seized while in the yard at her home by a man who had hidden in the shrubbery and whom she could not recognize in the darkness.

When Mrs. Wood called for help the man dashed the contents of a bottle of carbolic acid in her face and fled.

Efforts to locate the woman's assailant are fruitless.

When young Cole, who lived with his parents in Marshall, did not return to his home on Saturday a week ago, his mother at once declared he had been killed. She named the man she believed guilty and demanded that his cellar and the fair grounds be searched for the youth's body.

Motive Is Lacking.

The fair grounds yielded no clue to the disappearance and the man accused of the crime denied all knowledge of Cole's fate and offered to do anything in his power to aid in the search.

What the motive can be if Cole has been made away with is a mystery no one seems able to explain, as the young man had little money with him at the time of his disappearance.

Cole is 21 years of age, and for some time had been employed on street paving work at Marshall. He and his parents formerly resided in this city and they were in poor circumstances until the recent bequest.

As the carriage turned from the road to the higher ground on which the church is situated the way was obstructed by a villager named Butler, who stood lounging on his bicycle. The horses shied to one side, but Butler, without moving, exclaimed angrily: "— you. Do you want the whole road?"

WHY THEY PUSH IT

Peoples Drug Co. Recommend and Push Mi-o-na, the True Flesh-Forming Food.

"It is a pleasure to sell a medicine when their customers come in afterwards and tell them how much good it has done them," said Peoples Drug Co. the enterprising druggists to a Gazette man, "and that is why they like to sell and recommend Mi-o-na, the flesh-forming food and cure for stomach troubles."

They started its sale in Janesville by giving a signed guarantee bond, with every purchase to the effect that if Mi-o-na did not cure indigestion, and all stomach troubles and build up good, sound, healthy, flesh, they would return the money. This caused a lot of talk and so many people were impressed by this offer that the clerks have been busy selling Mi-o-na ever since.

They have so much faith in this preparation, that they are going to guarantee it, and will return the money to any purchaser of Mi-o-na who tells them that its use has not caused a gain in flesh or who has been troubled with indigestion since using it.

"Anyone who is thin, weak and under weight or has any digestive troubles whatever, is invited to leave 50c on deposit at their store and take home a box of Mi-o-na with the understanding that if it does not increase the weight, regulate digestion, and cure dyspepsia, the money can be withdrawn on demand without any questions."

We do not know but what we would be willing to pay interest on the deposit.

Peoples Drug Co. have tried to make their guarantee as plain and simple as possible. Every one who is annoyed by thinness, who is troubled with indigestion, or who feels weak and run-down, should take advantage of this guarantee offer on Mi-o-na, as we are willing to assume all the risk and pay for the medicine ourselves if it does not cure.

SOCIAL SIGNIFICANCE OF CHRISTIAN LOVE

Rev. J. H. Tippetts Talks on Different Meanings of the Word.

Sunday morning at the Court Street Methodist church the Reverend James H. Tippetts took for his sermon, the social significance of Christian love. His text was from 1. John 3:14. Lesson Ps. 16 1. John 3:14. "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." The following is his sermon, in part:

"We are told that when the scholars of the Bible society undertake to translate the Bible into the tongues and dialects of the heathen peoples, very frequently they have to create the very words which express Christian truths, because the words do not exist. There is no word for sin, there is no word for redemption, in these various dialects the tongues of the heathen races and the words do not exist. The same thing may be said of the conception of Christian love as it was first pronounced and expounded among these great and decaying civilizations who first heard the message of Christianity.

"There is no word for love, in the sense in which Christ and his apostles used it. Love had a domestic, a sentimental, and a physical significance, illustrated in the poetry of the whole race. Above all it was a symbol of physical sensation. To love upon the lips of Christ and his apostles meant none of these things. Love as the great masterword of the new born church was an absolute new word, standing for a kind of passion which was new to human experience. It is little wonder that early prosecutors of the Christian church entirely misinterpreted the life of a community whose watchword was love, attributing to such communities the most abominable acts, because the word had become saturated with abominable meanings by pagan poets, in vile emperors, and by the filthy imaginings of a corrupted people. How new the strange word must have sounded to them upon the lips of Christians may be measured by this text, which uses it as a boast, and as a test, and a watchword for a new kind of life.

"We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." Both words were new. It was by the utterance of these two words that Christianity broke up the empire of the old paganism, and created a new society and a new world. Measure the darling antithesis of this text. Life is represented by love and brotherhood, death by their absence. Where this new kind of love is not, there is death, dying socialists, dying nations. Where Christ's love comes, there is a rejuvenation of a nation, of society, and the creation of a new empire. The old hymn is no exaggeration; "Fly Christians to their rescue; fly, preach Jesus unto them e'er they die."

It is historically true, such communities are dying, and not through errors in spiritual knowledge only, or even chiefly. They are dying, through lack of social love. While materialism as a theory of the world is nearly extinct, materialism as a social force has still a deadly grip upon us, producing daily all those rapacious lusts which inflict injustice on the weak, and make our social life a state of warfare. We need clearer conceptions of spiritual and theological truth, no doubt, but we need a great deal more—the spirit and the temper of Jesus Christ, as measured by the love of society, our social relationship, and that spirit is love. The life of society, Christianity is no a dogma, it is conduct. "We now that we have passed from death unto life" not because we wear the name of Jesus Christ not because of our creed, not because of our shibboleths of a vain orthodoxy. "We know that we have passed from death unto life because we love our brethren."

It is not among those who handle and see the open sores of humanity that you will find despair of humanity. They know too much of the infinite depths of patience and sweetness and kindness that are concealed beneath the game and sin and ignorance, and it is not among those that you find the pessimist and the cynic. The pessimist and the cynic are those who stand afar off and pass by on the other side. Those who handle the wounded traveler, know him best. Bring love, not scorn to your task, and you will always find that your love is justified as the one Divine force for the social regeneration of mankind.

Men know the man who loves them. Dull as they may be they are able to discern the difference between me, between the man who serves them for obligation and the man who serves them for love. The miraculous ministry is always the loving ministry. "I could tell you, said a friend of Father Dolling, "of miraculous healing that had been wrought. And then he goes on to give an instance of how a young soldier said to him, "Father Dolling laid his hand upon my head, and I don't know why, but I told all that I had ever done." Ah! but we know why. We know that there is often more gospel of love in a touch, in a hand grasp than there is in many a sermon.

"Friends may have cast you out; there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother. Domestic love may fall you in your worst need. The love of Christ cannot fall you. Luper, as you are stained with gross sin, and hating yourself for your sin. Look up into the eyes of Christ. You will find no repulsion there, only love, pity, pardon, and in the hour when you thus come to Christ with a heart broken and softened with a sense of his divine love for you, you shall also pass from death unto life and become a new creature in Christ Jesus.

"Brother, sister, come, for when you are cast out by man, there is hospitality in the heart of God for you, for me, for us all, and for the whole wide world. For the love of God is wider than the measure of Man's mind, and the heart of the Eternal is most wonderfully kind."

One of the Wild West men said that he had not seen a graft work so well at any time during the season.

Killing Kings in Serbia.

A correspondent in Belgrade writes: "The bitterest sarcasm on the Serbian situation was made by an Englishman who has a smattering of the language. In the park there was a notice stating that something or other was strictly forbidden. I asked him what it was. 'So far as I can make out,' he replied, 'it says: "You are strictly forbidden to kill kings in the park. There is a palace specially provided for the purpose."'"

Don't Go It Blind.

To view love properly a man should be farsighted in one eye, to overlook defects, and nearsighted in the other, to appreciate women.—Town Topics.

WHO SAID HE SAW A SEA SERPENT?

Starr and Fathers Both Deny Imputation—Now Up to County Treasurer Rice.

The Delavan Lake sea serpent has again been seen, or at least it was "something big." It was three gentlemen from Janesville, who are in camp at the assembly, where only the strictest of temperance prevails, the strictest of temperance principles prevail and one of the three is the county clerk of Rock county, and the three each and severally, upon oath solemnly affirm that they saw in the lake the head of some large animal or fish protruding some two feet from the water and moving in an unexplainable fashion. The neck was at least twelve inches in circumference and the head was simply enormous. The creature disappeared upon their approach and they have since been discussing its identity. Some aver that it is the sea serpent, others that it is a big pickerel and others have different theories, but Rev. Washburn, who is authority on such matters, says that it is a deep sea porpoise which he brought from the Gulf of Mexico. The above is an extract from the Chicago Chronicle for yesterday. The county clerk of Rock county is Frank P. Starr, so he was called to account.

"Not guilty," said Mr. Starr. "I haven't been near Delavan Lake." Perhaps it is Jim Fathers. They may have confused the county clerk with the city treasurer.

Mr. Fathers was next accosted. "Not guilty," was his story. "I was at the assembly, but I didn't see the serpent, or start the report. I'll tell you who it must be. It was Miles Rice. It was the county treasurer and not the county clerk." Mr. Rice is out of the city and will not be here until Thursday. In the meantime the county treasurer's reputation for veracity rests under a heavy cloud, and his return is eagerly awaited.

How the Orient Gets Its Meal.

"Two women shall be grinding at the mill." In the East the day's supply of meal is ground each morning by two women, who sit opposite each other, on a large, clean cloth with the small millstones between them. They push the upper stone around and around by means of a stick standing upright in a hole in one side, both women holding it. They usually sing as they grind.

Reach After Converts.

The Protestants of Boston are making contributions to a fund of $60,000 to convert Spanish women. Headquarters will be opened in Madrid, and it will be known as the Gulick Institute. Bishop Lawrence of the Episcopal Church of Boston says it is time for his church to convert the Italians, who are settling in that city in large numbers.

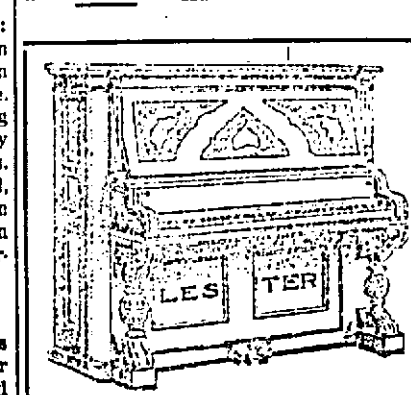

Inspiration.

"The Stickit Minister" was begun late one evening, and the bulk of it was written in less than a week. Then, as the author himself said afterward, he "ignominiously lost hold." But after a little time he was seized with fresh inspiration and the rest of the book was written in forty hours' actual working time.

Unique Spirit of Loyalty.

It is not all war in the industrial world. Here are 6,000 employees of the United States Express Company volunteering to furnish pieces of skin for the benefit of Assistant General Superintendent Fredericks, who was scalded in a train wreck. There is still something left of the old human relations between captains and privates of industry.
